H. FRERE Winchester Troper p. ix, 'Trope'..is the regular word to describe additions to the Introit, Offertory and Communion, and is also more rarely found in connection with the Ite missa est or Benedicamus at the close of Mass.

6. In the Moravian Church, One of the three divisions forming the 'Unity of the Brethren'.

(1780 B. LA TROBE tr. Crantz's Hist. Brethren 355 In.. 1749..the administration of the Reformed tropus in the Unity of the Brethren was tendered to, and accepted by, the Bishop of Sodor and Man, Thomas Wilson.) 1809 BOGUE & BENNETT Hist. Dissenters (1833) III. 6 The three different classes of persons who compose the Unity, bear among the brethren the name of tropes or tropuses.

7. In Greek Philosophy: see quots.

1866 FERRIER Gr.k. Philos. I. xv. 467 Of these tropes or Sceptical arguments Sextus enumerates ten. 1901 R. D. HICKS Stoic & Epicurean 376 Ænesidemus undertook to arrange the whole material at the disposal of the Sceptic in his contention against the dogmatic position under ten heads or tropes. The word trope properly denotes procedure; the ten tropes were intended to contain the means of refuting dogmatism in all possible forms, and to provide directions for stating every line of available argument which could lead to negative conclusions and paralyse assent.

8. Geom. The reciprocal of a node on a curve or surface; in different cases, a multiple tangent or tangent plane, or a plane or developable surface touching the given surface in a particular way.

1869 CAYLEY Math. Papers VI. 330 Using 'trope' as the reciprocal term to node. 1875 [see TROPAL].

Tropee, obs. form of TROPHY.

Tropeine (trōu·pēiain), Chem. [Arbitrarily altered from TROPINE.] Generic name for the esters or compound ethers of tropine.

‖ Trophi (trōu·fĭi), sb. pl. Zool. [mod.L., pl. of trophus, a. Gr. τροφός feeder, f. τρέφειν to nourish.] A collective name for the mouth-parts in insects, as organs for seizing and preparing the food. Also applied to the parts of the pharynx in rotifers, having a similar function.

1826 KIRBY & SP. Entomol. xxxiii. III. 355 Trophi, the different instruments or organs contained in the mouth, or closing it, and employed in mandication or deglutition. They include the Labrum, Labium, Mandibulæ, Maxillæ, Lingua, and Pharynx. 1833 LYELL Princ. Geol. III. 277 The antennæ, tarsi and trophi are generally very obscure or distorted. 1888 ROLLESTON & JACKSON Anim. Life 633 Class Rotifera..The mouth leads into an oesophagus, followed..usually directly by a muscular pharynx or mastax containing the chitinous jaw-apparatus or 'trophi'..The shape of the 'trophi' is variable.

Trophic (trŏ·fik), a. (sb.) Biol. [ad. Gr. τροφικός, f. τροφή nourishment: see -IC. Cf. F. trophique.] Of or pertaining to nutrition; spec. of certain nerves and nerve-centres, Concerned with or regulating the nutrition of the tissues.

1873 A. FLINT Physiol. Man, Nervous Syst. ii. 80 Centres attached to the sensory system of nerves, which have, as far as we know, a purely trophic influence over the nerves. 1875 H. C. WOOD Therap. (1879) 559 Nerves which preside over nutrition,—the so-called trophic nerves. 1894 Lancet 3 Nov. 1090 The large amount of wasting of the muscles.. might suggest the possibility of a trophic lesion. 1899 Allbutt's Syst. Med. VII. 124 Another affection of the lower limbs, possibly trophic,..is rupture of the tendo Achillis.

B. sb. Something that promotes nutrition.

1893 R. S. D'ODIARDI Med. Electricity 54 The second class is composed of trophics, or nutrients, i. e., promoters of nutrition.

So Tro·phical a. (rare) = trophic adj.; hence Tro·phically adv., in relation to nutrition.

1857 DUNGLISON Med. Lex., Trophical Nerves, the organic nerves, or nerves of the sympathetic system. 1900 Lancet 23 June 1772/2 This..implies continuity of the protoplasm of one neurone with another, but trophically and genetically the two are independent.

Trophied (trŏ·fid), a. Also 8 trophy'd. [f. TROPHY sb. or v. + -ED.]

1652 DRAYTON Polyolb. XXX. 139 From whose stone-trophied head, it [the echo] on to Wendrosse went. 1718 ROWE tr. Lucan VIII. 1722 The Name that wont the trophy'd Arch to grace. 1798 S. GLASFURD Rifle Ind. Jungle 287 That mighty head shall be accorded the post of honour on already well-trophied walls.

2. Formed into or constituting a trophy.

a 1843 SOUTHEY Comm.-pl. Bk. IV. 55/1 The trophied armour damp gleaming to the central fire. 1887 Daily News 16 May 5/7 The Exchange was..tastefully decorated, each window..having its trophied flags and shield.

Trophilegic (trŏfĭle·dʒik), a. Biol. [irreg. f. Gr. τροφή nourishment + L. legĕre to gather, to collect + -IC. (Perhaps suggested by L. frūgilĕgus fruit-gathering.)] Collecting nutriment.

1898 Nature 3 Nov. 15/1 The trophilegic action of the fronds [of ferns], in connection with which certain arrangements have been observed, destined to facilitate the passage of water to the roots.

Trophism (trŏ·fizm). Phys. [f. Gr. τροφή nourishment + -ISM.] The process of nutrition of the tissues; 'direct trophic influence' (Dorland Med. Dict. 1900–13).

1898 A. HAMILTON Nerv. Dis. 444 Various depraved conditions of sensibility, motility, and trophism may follow.

Tropho- (trŏ·fo), combining form repr. Gr. τροφή nourishment, f. τρέφειν to nourish: entering into various technical terms, chiefly of biology and allied sciences. Tro·phoblast [-BLAST], a layer of cells external to the embryo, having the function of supplying it with nourishment; also applied by some to the morbid growth in cancer, as held to be an abnormal development of the same tissue; hence Trophobla·stic a., relating to or consisting of trophoblast. Trophoca·lyx [CALYX], a cup-shaped body from which the placenta is developed in certain mammals, as bats and moles. Tro·phocyte (-sāit) [-CYTE], each of a set of cells forming one of the constituents of the fatty tissue in adult insects. Tro·phodisc, -disk, a disk-shaped body from which the placenta is developed in certain mammals, as rabbits. ‖ Tropholecithus (-lesĭpĭθŭs) [mod.L., f. Gr. λέκιθος yolk], the nutritive yolk of an ovum; hence Tropholecithal a. Tropho·logy [-LOGY], that department of physiology which deals with nutrition. ‖ Trophone·ma (pl. -ne·mata) [mod.L., f. Gr. νῆμα thread], each of the glandular villi of the uterus in certain viviparous fishes, which supply nutriment to the embryos. ‖ Tro·phoneurosis (-ōu·sis), pl. -oses (-ōu·sīz) [NEUROSIS], any one of a class of functional disorders due to derangement of the trophic action of the nerves; hence Trophoneurotic (-ŏ·rŏtik) a., pertaining to or of the nature of trophoneurosis. Tropho·pathy [Gr. -παθεια suffering], any derangement of nutrition, esp. of a tissue. Tro·phophore (-fōəɹ) [ad. Gr. τροφοφόρος bringing nourishment], any one of the wandering amœboid nutritive cells in a sponge which give rise to gemmules or embryos. Trophophoric (-fŏ·rik) a. [f. as prec. + -IC], having the function of supplying provisions. Trophoporous (-pŏ·rŏrəs) a. [f. as prec. + -OUS], pertaining to or of the nature of a trophophore. Tro·phoplasm (-plæz'm), Nägeli's term for that portion of the protoplasm of a germ or cell which is supposed to furnish nutriment to the idioplasm; hence Trophopla·smic a., pertaining to or of the nature of trophoplasm. Tro·phoplast, Meyer's term for a specialized granule of protoplasm in a vegetable cell: = PLASTID 2. Tro·phopo·llen [cf. trophosperm below], a proposed name for the partition of the loculus of an anther. Tro·phosome (-sōum) [Gr. σῶμα body], the aggregate of nutritive zooids of a hydrozoan (distinguished from gonosome); hence Trophoso·mal a. Tro·phosperm [ad. F. trophosperme (Richard, a 1819), f. Gr. σπέρμα seed], a proposed name for the placenta of a seed-vessel. Tro·phosphere, a spherical body (consisting of the trophoblast and the trophospongia) from which the placenta is developed in certain mammals, as hedgehogs. ‖ Trophospongia (-spŏ·ndʒiă) [mod.L. (Hubrecht), f. Gr. σπογγιά sponge], a compact layer of cells between the trophoblast and the decidual tissue; hence Trophospongial, -ian adjs. ‖ Tropho·taxis [mod.L. = cf. TAXIS 6], = trophotropism. Trophotro·pic a., pertaining to or exhibiting trophotropism. Tropho·tropism [Gr. -τροπος turning; after heliotropism, etc.], reaction of an organism or cell to the stimulus of a source or supply of food by movement towards or away from it (positive or negative t.). Trophozoite (-zōu·ait) [Gr. ζῷον animal: cf. -ITE¹] 3, a sporozoon (endoparasitic protozoon) in its growing stage, when it is absorbing nutriment from its host. Trophozooid (-zōu·oid), a nutritive zooid of any colonial organism, as a hydrozoan.

1889 HUBRECHT in Q. Jrnl. Microsc. Sci. Dec. 299 This striking difference between somatic mesoblast and trophoblast becomes still more accentuated in the next developmental phases. Ibid. 385 If we agree..to designate the outer layer alone as trophoblast, the outer layer plus a thin layer of somatic mesoblast without blood-vessels as diplotrophoblast [etc.]. 1897 *Contemp. Troubadour (trū'bădu:r). [a. F. troubadour (16th c. in Godef. Compl.), ad. Prov. trobador (= Cat. trobador, Sp., Pg. trovador, It. trovatore), agent-n. f. Prov. trobar, Sp., Pg. trovar, It. trovare, F. trouver to find, invent, compose in verse; cf. Trouvère.

The origin of the verb itself is questioned. As it exists in most of the Romanic langs., it is generally held to be late popular L. Diez explained it as formed by metathesis from L. turbāre to disturb, through the sense 'turn up'. Cf. for the form F. troubler, OF. trubler, from late L. turbulāre*: see Etymol. Wörterbuch ed. 4, s.v.; cf. also the Neapol. controuare from L. conturbāre. Another conjecture in Du Cange would take the Romanic forms from med.L. tropus, Trope sb. 5, a verse or versicle, whence tropāre*. Both of these, and other conjectures, present difficulties.]

One of a class of lyric poets, living in southern France, eastern Spain, and northern Italy, from the 11th to the 13th centuries, who sang in Provençal (langue d'oc), chiefly of chivalry and gallantry, sometimes including wandering minstrels and jongleurs.

1727–41 Chambers Cycl. s.v., The poesy of the troubadours consisted in sonnets, pastorals, songs [etc.]. 1767 Percy *Rel. Ancs. Engs. Trouse (trūz, trauz), *sb.*2 Now Hist. and arch. [App. taken in 16th c. from Irish (and Sc. Gaelic) triubhas, recorded c 1500 (see quot.), orig. pronounced trówds or trówds, in mod. Irish pronunc. trius (see TREWS). (The quot. of 1306, from its early date and late form, is doubtful, and may not belong to this word.) The 16th and 17th c. quots. here and under TREWS refer to it as worn by the Celts. It has been held to be derived from OF. trousse TRUSS, etc. q.v., but a careful examination of OF. literature by M. Antoine Thomas shows no trace of trousse in the sense assumed, which appears, later than in English, in Miège's Dict. 1679. The thing is said by Littré to have been worn (? in 17th c.) by young pages and by certain novices, and to survive in certain expressions, as il avait quitté les trousses, and être aux trousses de l'ennemi.

As to the ulterior history, Prof. Bergin of Dublin thinks well of the suggestion in Holder Alt-kelt. Sprachschatz. II. 1974, that the Celtic triubhas represents OF. trebus 'sorte de chaussure ou de chausse' (13th c., Godef.), from late L. tubrides 'tubucos vocatos quod tibia braccasque tegant' (Isidore Orig. xix. xxii. 30). 'Tubraci quod a braccis ad tibias usque perveniant', which appears later as tribraci.

Miège F. Dict. (1679) has 'Trousses, sorte de chausses, trunk-breches'.]

1. A musical wind-instrument (or one of a class of such) of bright, powerful, and penetrating tone, used from ancient times, especially for military or other signals, and in modern times also in the orchestra; it consists of a cylindrical or conical tube, usually of metal (anciently also of horn or wood), straight or curved (or bent upon itself), with a cup-shaped mouthpiece and a flaring bell.

The natural tones of the instrument are the series of harmonics produced by varying force of breath; in modern forms of it additional tones are obtained by means of slides, crooks, valves, or keys.

Tubal (tiū·băl), a. [f. L. tub-us TUBE + -AL.]

1. Of, pertaining to, or of the nature of a tube; consisting of tubes; tubular. rare.

1735-6 H. BROOKE Univ. Beauty iv. 126 Its wanton floods the tubal system leave. 1899 Allbutt's Syst. Med. VI. 46 In the early tubal form of the heart, the auricles are placed below..the ventricles.

2. Anat. and Path. Pertaining to, occurring in, or affecting the Fallopian tube, as tubal dropsy, pregnancy, the bronchial tubes, as tubal cough, respiration, or the renal tubules, as tubal nephritis.

1822-34 Good's Study Med. (ed. 4) IV. 181 Ecgyesis Tubalis, Tubal Extrelation. 1857 BULLOCK Caseaux' Midwif. 244 Having been once deposited in the tubal canal, the ovule traverses its whole length, and falls into the uterine cavity. Ibid. 246 Tubal Pregnancy..is the most frequent of all the varieties of extra-uterine pregnancy. 1857 DUNGLISON Med. Lex. s.v. Murmur, Respiratory, The respiration, perceived over the trachea and bronchial tubes, is called tracheal or bronchial or tubal..according to the situation in which it is heard. 1860 MAYNE Expos. Lex., Tubal Cough, see Bronchial Cough. 1873 T. H. GREEN Introd. Pathol. (ed. 3) 276 Tubal nephritis..is one of those morbid processes which constitute Bright's disease. 1890 BILLINGS Med. Dict. s.v., Tubal dropsy, hydrosalpinx.

Tubar (tiū·băr), a. [f. as prec. + -AR[1]: cf. F. tubaire.] Of the form of a tube; tubular.

1887 SOLLAS in Encycl. Brit. XXII. 418/1 Articulate and inarticulate tubar skeletons of calcareous sponges.

Tubate (tiū·bĕt), a. Bot. rare. [ad. mod.L. tubātus, f. L. tubus TUBE: see -ATE[2].] Formed into a tube; having a tube or tubes; tubal, tubular.

1866 in Treas. Bot.

Tubbal (tʊ·băl). Also tubble. [? dial. var. of TWIBILL.] Local name of the common mattock, or of a special form (see quot. 1902); in Cornwall, a miner's tool of similar form (= TUBBER[2]).

1847-78 HALLIWELL, Tubble, a mattock. Devon. 1880 W. Cornwall Gloss., Tubbal, a miner's tool. 1902 Rep. Proviac. Aug. (E.D.D.), Tubbal, usually a heavy mattock, with a small axe-head, used for grubbing or rooting. Also a very common name for the common mattock.

Tubber (tʊ'bəɹ). [f. Tub sb. and v. + -er 1.]

a. One who makes tubs, a cooper. b. One who lives in a tub, a cynic like Diogenes. c. A rowing man who is 'coached' in a 'tub' (nonce-use). d. One who tubs: see Tub v. 1 b.

1845 Brockett N. C. Words, Tubber, a cooper, a maker of tubs. 1883 Almondbury & Huddersfield Gloss., Tubber, a cooper. 1891 Blackw. Mag. Mar. 374 A concession to Diogenes and other tubbers. 1894 Sporting Life 28 Feb. 6/2 Shortly after four o'clock tubbing practice was begun... Lewis and Kerrison were the third set of tubbers taken out.

Tu·bber 2. local. [Cf. Tubbal, Twibill.] A tool used in Cornish mines: = Beele 2.

1671 Phil. Trans. VI. 2124 The Instruments commonly used in Mines, that serve for ripping the Loads... A Beele or Cornish Tubber (i. e. double points) of 8 l. or 10 l. weight, sharped at both ends, well steeled and holed in the middle. 1753 Chambers Cycl. Suppl., Tubber-Men are the people who work with this tool, ...called in other places beel-men.

Tubbiness. [f. Tubby + -ness.] Tubby quality or condition.

1881 Daily News 29 Dec. 6/4 Fishing smacks...Stoutly built..and somewhat inclined to tubbiness. 1906 H. G. Wells Days of Comet (1907) 130 Its long skirts accentuated the tubbiness of his body, the shortness of his legs. 1910 Sat. Rev. 18 June 785/2 Arpeggio passages..opulent and satisfying without any suspicion of tubbiness.

Tubbing (tʊ'bɪŋ), vbl. sb. [f. Tub v. (or sb.) + -ing 1.] The action of Tub v.

1. a. † Treatment in the sweating-tub: see Tub sb. 1 b. b. Washing or bathing in a tub or bath.

1657 G. Starkey Nature's Exaltic. To Rdr. 9 Salivation in the Lues or Tubbing is a dotage. a 1845 Hood Black Job xiii, In spite of all the tubbing, rubbing, scrubbing...The blacks..were as black as ever! 1894 Boase Exeter Coll. (O.H.S.) p. clxii, The quite modern institution of tubbing in the mornings.

2. The lining of a pit-shaft or tunnel with a watertight casing: see Tub v. 2; concr. the casing of timber, masonry, or metal sections used for this.

1839 Ure Dict. Arts 969 The pit..must..be sunk through the quicksand by means of tubbing. 1851 Greenwell Coal-trade Terms Northumb. & Durh. 55 At present, tubbing is put in in metal segments. 1855 Orr's Circ. Sc., Inorg. Nat. 237 There are several kinds of stopping out water, or tubbing, as it is called...Stone tubbing... Plank tubbing...Solid wood tubbing...and Metal tubbing. 1862 Smiles Engineers III. 297 The skilful casing of the shaft with segments of cast-iron—a process called 'tubbing'.

1839 Ure Dict. Arts 973 The tubbing deals..must now be fixed. 1883 Gresley Gloss. Terms Coal Mining, Tubbing plates, cast-iron segments forming portions of a ring of tubbing...Tubbing wedges, small wooden wedges of pitch pine..hammered in between the joints of tubbing plates...thus stopping back every drop of water from the shaft. 1886 J. Barrowman Sc. Mining Terms 68 Tubbing-deals, deals put behind tubbing in a shaft.

3. Rowing in a 'tub'; training for a boat-race in a 'tub': see Tub sb. 3, v. 4.

1884 Pall Mall G. 11 Jan. 10/2 Operations on the Cam commenced yesterday with 'tubbing'. 1904 Daily News 23 Mar. 11/2 The Dark Blues did some tubbing work first.

Tubbish (tʊ'bɪʃ), a. [f. Tub sb. + -ish 1.] Somewhat tubby; resembling a tub.

1586 Golding Ovid's Met. IV. (1593) 97 Of tubbish timbrels ..a hoarse and jarring sound. 1785 Wolcott (P. Pindar) Lett. Roy. Acad. iv. 11 Men whose heads are rather tubbish, Or drum-like, better formed for sound than sense. 1836–7 Dickens Sk. Boz, Charac. vii, He was a short, round, large-faced, tubbish sort of man.

Tubble: see Tubbal.

‖ Tubboe (tʊ'bō). Also tubba. [? native word in W. Africa.] Each of the excrescences or sores in framboesia; also in pl. = Framboesia, Yaws.

1769 E. Bancroft Guiana 387 The infectious matter... produces subcutaneous sores, which are called Tubboes. 1822–34 Good's Study Med. (ed. 4) II. 432 When the tumours point from the soles of the feet, they cannot press through the thickness of the skin, and hence form imperfectly, and produce highly elevated calluses, which are called tubba or crab-yaws. 1898 Sir P. Manson Trop. Diseases xxvii. 428 'Tubboes', 'tubba', 'crabs', 'crappox', 'crabes' are expressions applied to the painful mutilations on the soles of the feet [in yaws]. Forms of chronic dermatitis on hands and feet are 'dartres', 'tubboe', 'crabs', dry 'tubboes'.

Tubby (tʊ'bɪ), a. [f. Tub sb. + -y.] Resembling or suggesting a tub.

1. Tub-shaped, tub-like; of rounded outline, and stout or broad in proportion to the length; of a person, corpulent.

1825 Anster tr. Faustus II. v. (1889) 269 Come, short-horned, thick Devils, tubby, stubby. 1829 Sala The round Clock (1861) 14 They are mostly square and squat in rigging, and somewhat tubby in build. 1885 Pall Mall G. 9 June 2/2 In 1690..he [Stradivarius] began to improve his model, bringing it flatter, the great secret of the true violin as opposed to the old tubby model. 1891 Kipling Plain Tales fr. Hills vii. 54 Fat Captains and tubby Majors. 1905 Westm. Gaz. 21 Mar. 4/2 Driving a tubby [motor] car.

2. Sounding like a tub when struck; dull or wooden in sound. (Said of stringed instruments.)

1806–7 J. Beresford Miseries Hum. Life (ed. 3) xvi. 90 The dead, lumpish, tubby tones of the fourth and fifth strings of the guittar. 1883 Hawkis My Musical Life (1884) I. 95 He [the violin] goes 'tubby' (a term used to express a dull vibration).

Tube (tiʊb), sb. [f. tube (1460 in Godef. Compl.), ad. L. tub-us.] I. Artificial.

1. A hollow body, usually cylindrical, and long in proportion to its diameter, of wood, metal, glass, or other material, used to convey or contain a liquid or fluid, or for other purposes; a pipe.

A more recent and more generic term than pipe, in which the form of the thing is chiefly considered, and thus used in reference to many things to which pipe is not applied, pipe being an older term retained for tubes used for the passage of liquids, smoke, air, or gas, while tube is applied to most recent inventions; but the distinction is often arbitrary, depending on the custom of the workshop.

1658 Phillips, Tube, ...any long pipe through which water or other liquid substance is conveyed. 1660 Boyle New Exp. Phys. Mech. i. 33 The Mercury in the [barometric] Tube fell down lower, about three inches, at the top of the Mountain then at the bottom. 1690 Locke Hum. Und. II. iv. § 3 When the Sucker in a Pump is drawn, the space it filled in the Tube is certainly the same, whether any other body follows the motion of the Sucker or no. 1837 Goring & Pritchard Microgr. 206 [In] a solar microscope..B, the tube containing the condensing lens. 1846 Greener Sc. Gunnery 288 Lateral pressure on the sides of the tube of the gun. 1861 N. A. Woods Pr. Wales in Canada & U.S. 122 The whole Tube [of a tubular bridge] was first actually built in England and sent out piece meal.

b. = Tubing, material of a tubular form.

1893 J. Badcock Dom. Amusem. 78 Some feet or yards.. of that most pliable composition tube, employed by the makers of beer engines. 1893 J. A. Hodges Elem. Photogr. (1907) 87 A piece of india rubber tube.

2. In specific applications usually indicated by context. a. A glass or other tube used in chemistry; esp. = Test-tube. Tube of safety = safety-tube (Safety 10).

1800 tr. Lagrange's Chem. I. 60 Melt the phosphorus in boiling water, and apply to it one of the ends of the tube, while you hold the other in your mouth. 1807 T. Thomson Chem. (ed. 3) II. 207 A tube of safety is a tube open at its upper end, and having its lower end plunged in water. 1827 Faraday Chem. Manip. I. (1842) 32 Glass tubes of various sizes closed at one end. Ibid. xiv. 307 The best tubes are those made of Bohemian potash glass, and used by Liebig in his analyses of organic bodies.

b. A tubular surgical instrument; a cannula; an intubation-tube.

1803 Med. Jrnl. IX. 7 The tube is to be passed downwards until it again reaches the substance to be extracted. 1857 Dunglison Med. Lex., Tube, Œsophageal, stomach tube... Rectal tube, defecation tube. 1879 Knight Dict. Mech. s. v. (Surgical tube) a. An esophageal tube, capable of being passed into the stomach. b. An elastic gum tube passed per anum into the colon...c. A tracheal tube. 1902 Brit. Med. Jrnl. 2 July, Owing to the depth of the wound two drainage tubes were introduced at the time of operation.

c. A fire-tube or water-tube in a steam-boiler; a boiler-tube.

1833 N. Arnott Physics (ed. 5) II. 32 In a long waggon-shaped boiler the tubes..should be made flat and broad enough to reach from side to side. 1903 Daily Chron. 7 Jan. 7/2 In the fire-tube or cylindrical boiler the fire and smoke went through the tubes, and in the water-tube the fire was outside the tubes and the water passed through them.

d. A small collapsible cylinder of tin or lead used to hold semi-liquid substances, as oil-colours.

1842 Rand Patent Specif. No. 8863 Their contents may easily be squeezed out by collapsing the said tubes or cases. 1877 Knight Dict. Mech. 2643/1 Collapsible tin tubes for artists' colors. 1881 [see tube-colour 1 2 b].

e. In wool or worsted spinning: cf. tube yarn in 1 2 and Tube v. 2.

1884 West. Morn. News 5 Sept. 7/4 The foreign yarn trade keeps pretty brisk, particularly in lustre wefts, and similar yarns on the tube.

f. (See quot.)

1877 Knight Dict. Mech., Tube, ...4. the barrel of a chain-pump.

3. An optical instrument of tubular form, esp. a telescope: more fully optic tube. Now arch.

1651 [see Optic A. 4]. 1668 Pepys Diary 4 Dec., Wrote a letter at the Board, by the help of a tube, to Lord Brouncker. 1668–9 Ibid. 14 Mar., My eyes being very bad, and..I forced to find a way to use by turns both my tube, one after another. a 1718 Prior Solomon III. 470 Of his fair Deeds a distant View I took; But turn'd the Tube upon his Faults to look. 1781 Cowper Charity 387 Some grave optician.. finds that through his tubes aslant the sight, They cannot give it. 1807 J. Barlow Columb. VII. 386 On the tall decks, their curious chiefs explore, With optic tube, our campencumber'd shore. 1867 G. Gilfillan Night iv. 116 To the silent tube in Herschel's hand A hundred suns spring up.

†4. Applied to a tobacco-pipe. poet. Obs. rare.

1736 I. H. Browne Pipe of Tobacco Poems (1768) 117 Little tube of mighty pow'r, Charmer of an idle hour. 1784 Cowper Task v. 55 With pressure of his thumb To adjust the fragrant charge of a short tube, That fumes beneath his nose.

†5. A cannon; also a rifle or hand-gun. poet.

1762 Falconer Ode Dk. of York 138 The ships their horrid tubes display, Tier over tier. 1801 Sporting Mag. XVII. 148 With curious skill the deathful tube is made. 1828 Byron Siege of Corr. iii, To point the tube, the lance to wield.

b. A small pipe introduced through the vent, formerly used in firing cannon; a friction-tube, quill-tube, or priming-tube.

1797 Encycl. Brit. (ed. 3) VIII. 230/2 Firing it [gunpowder] with tubes, introduced at a vent bored through the button and breech of the gun, of different lengths, so as to reach the different parts of the powder. 1828 Webster, Tube, in artillery, an instrument of tin, used in quick firing. 1867 Smyth Sailor's Word-bk., Tubes, for guns, a kind of portable priming, for insertion into the vent,—of various patterns.

c. The inner cylinder of a built-up gun, upon which the outer case is shrunk. Cf. Tubage 1 b.

6. a. A musical wind-instrument, a pipe. poet. rare. b. The main cylinder of a wind-instrument (Cent. Dict. 1891).

1820 Keats Hyperion I. 206 Solemn tubes, Blown by the serious Zephyrs, gave of sweet And wandering sounds, slow-breathed melodies.

7. a. A pneumatic dispatch-tube.

1860 Once a Week 28 July 130/2 Written messages are sucked through tubes...We hear a whistle; this is to give notice that a despatch is about to be put into the tube at Mincing Lane, two-thirds of a mile distant. 1861, 1874 [see Dispatch sb. 12]. 1865, 1894 [implied in tube-journey, tube-room: see 12]. 1905 Daily Chron. 27 May 4/3 From Whitelay's 6,194 parcels were dispatched in five hours, of which 78 per cent. could have been sent by tube.

b. The cylindrical tunnel in which an underground electric railway runs; also short for tube-railway. colloq.

Twopenny Tube, the Central London Railway, opened in 1900: see Twopenny.

1900 H. D. Browne in Londoner 30 June (heading), The Twopenny Tube. 1900 Punch 4 July 7/1. 1901 Lancet 2 Nov. 1209/2 A good portion of the air must be driven backwards and forwards unchanged in the tube. 1904 Westm. Gaz. 24 Oct. 2/3 When the phrase 'the twopenny tube' came into existence..a similar electric 'tube' had been in regular running for close upon ten years. 1905 Rider Haggard in Gardener's Year May 265 The first part of my journey.. was by Tube.

8. Physics. A tubular figure conceived as being formed by lines of force or action passing through every point of a closed curve; as tube of flow (see Flow sb.[1] 1 b), tube of force, tube of induction.

1878 W. K. Clifford Dynamic 109 If we take a small closed curve, and draw lines of flow through all points on it, the tubular surface traced out by these lines is called a tube of flow. 1881 [see Flow sb.[1] 1 b]. 1885 Watson & Burbury Math. The. Electr. & Magn. I. 104 The portions of any surfaces in an electric field intercepted by the same tube of force are called corresponding surfaces,..the algebraic sum of the electricities included in the tube in its passage from any one surface to any other. 1902 Sloane Stand. Electr. Dict., Tubes of Force, aggregations of lines of force, either electrostatic or magnetic. They generally have a truncated, conical or pyramidal shape and are not hollow. Every cross-section contains the same number of lines.

II. Natural.

9. Anat. and Zool. A hollow cylindrical vessel or organ in the animal body; a canal, duct, passage, or pipe, as in the circulatory, alimentary, respiratory, reproductive, or excretory systems; often preceded by a defining word, as alimentary, bronchial, Eustachian, Fallopian, intestinal tube, etc.: see these words.

[cf. 1398 Florio, Tubo, ...the pipe wherethrough the marrow of the backe bone runneth. 1611 Cotgr., Tube, a Conduit-pipe; also, the hollow of the back-bone, or the pipe through which the marrow thereof doth runne.] 1661 Blount Glossogr. (ed. 9). 1696 Phillips (ed. 5), Fallopian Tubes, two slender Passages proceeding from the Womb. 1741, 1755 Eustachian tube [see Eustachian]. 1809 Med. Jrnl. XXI. 400 The œsophagus..that animated tube. 1826 Kirby & Sp. Entomol. I. xii. 198 Connected by a slender tube with each mandible in spiders is a vessel with spiral folds, which seems properly to belong to this head. 1831 J. Davies Man. Mat. Med. 374 Its passage in the intestinal tube is attended with the same phenomena. 1904 Brit. Med. Jrnl. 10 Sept. 584 The main depots of lymphocytes.. are round the hollow tubes of the body.

b. One of the siphons of a mollusc.

1839 Darwin Voy. Nat. i. (1852) 8 It [cuttle-fish] could..take good aim by directing the tube or siphon on the under side of its body.

10. A hollow cylindrical channel in a plant; spec. in Bot. the lower united portion of a gamopetalous corolla or gamosepalous calyx; also, a united circle of stamens.

a 1704 Locke Elem. Nat. Philos. ix. (1754) 34 This [juice] is convey'd by the stalk up into the branches, and leaves, through little, and in some plants, imperceptible tubes. 1760 J. Lee Introd. Bot. i. iii. (1765) 7 Monopetalous [corolla], consists of two Parts, viz. the Tube, or lower Part, which is usually Tube-shaped; and the Limb, or upper Part. 1776 Withering Brit. Plants (1796) IV. 310 Tubes white, brownish with age. 1807 J. E. Smith Phys. Bot. 394 Syngenesia. Stamens united by their Anthers into a tube, rarely by their Filaments also. 1884 Bower & Scott De Bary's Phaner. 187 The laticiferous tubes permeate the whole body of the plant, in most cases as a continuous system.

11. Applied to other tubular or cylindrical objects or formations of natural origin.

1831 Literary Gaz. 15 Jan. 44/2 Lightning Tubes—In the neighbourhood of the old castle of Remstein..there have been found this summer very firm and long vitreous tubes. 1860 Tyndall Glac. II. xxv. 362 The tube in fact resembled a vast organ-pipe. 1865, 1884 [see Fulguritic]. 1878 Huxley Physiogr. 190 The main mass..thus forms a hard stony tube lining the volcanic chimney.

III. 12. attrib. and Comb., as tube attendant, -holder, -room, system, trade, -vase, -wall, -work, -worker; tube-rolling sb. and adj.; tube-eyed, -like, -shaped adjs.; in sense 2 a, as tube-apparatus, -atmolyser, -bath, -chemistry, -furnace, -receiver, -retort; in sense 7 b, as tube bill (Bill sb.[3] 3), conductor, mileage, railway, -route, station, -train, traveller, tunnel.

‖ b. A genus of underground discomycetous fungi, comprising the truffles.

[1693 Phil. Trans. XVII. 824 The Tubera Terræ..observed lately at Rushton in Northamptonshire..are indeed the true French Truffles, the Italian Tartufli. 1699 EVELYN Acetaria 42 Truffles, Pig-Nuts, and other subterraneous Tubera.] 1704 J. HARRIS Lex. Techn. I, Tuber, properly, is a subterraneous Mushroom, or a Truffle; but by Botanick Writers, is often used to signifie the round turgid Roots of some Plants: which they call Tuberose, or Knobby Roots.

2. A rounded swelling or protuberant part in the animal body. a. Path. A morbid swelling or enlargement, as of a gland, etc.

1706 PHILLIPS (ed. Kersey), Tuber,..a Swelling or Bunch in a Man's Body. 1834 Good's Study Med. (ed. 4) IV. 233 Those who are constitutionally predisposed to a production of tubers and tubercles. 1888 Fagge & Pye-Smith Princ. Med. (ed. 2) I. 96 In a solid organ it [i.e. a tumour] may form a rounded mass, which is called a nodule or tuber.

b. Anat. A rounded projecting part or structure; a tuberosity.

Chiefly as Latin, with pl. tubera: often with defining word, as the specific name of such a structure: e.g. tuber cinereum, a conical projection at the base of the brain; tuber cochleæ or tympani, the promontory of the tympanum.

1741 Monro Anat. (ed. 3) 209 The Tuber is afterwards added in the Manner that other Epiphyses are. 1829 Dunglison Med. Lex., Tuber cinereum, a grayish Tubercle, seen at the base of the brain behind the commissure of the optic nerves. 1866 Huxley Preh. Rem. Caithn. 110 Norwegians are remarkable for the length of their skulls, and the very general development of an occipital tuber, or probole.

3. gen. A rounded projection, protuberance. rare.

1888 Doughty Arabia Deserta I. 32 We..came where in a torrent bed are laid bare certain great tubers of the lime rock underlying.

Tuberaceous (tiūbərēˈʃəs), a. Bot. [f. mod.L. Tuberāceī (masc. pl.), -ācea (fem. pl.), f. Tuber: see prec. 1 b and -ACEOUS.] Belonging to the order Tuberaceæ or Tuberaceï of discomycetous fungi, typified by the genus Tuber.

1909 in Cent. Dict. Suppl.

Tuberated (tiūˈbərētēd), a. [f. L. tūberāt-us covered with tubers or knobs, f. tūber, Tuber [2]: see -ed.] Having a tuber or rounded swelling; in Her. applied to a serpent borne with the middle part twisted in a close knot.

1828 Webster Encycl. Her. 1. Gloss., Tuberated, gibbous, knotted, or swelled out, as the middle part of the serpent.

Tuberation (tiūbərēˈʃən). rare—[1]. [f. as prec. + -ation.] Formation or production of a tuber or tubers.

1727 Bailey vol. II, Tuberation, a swelling. 1902 Times 19 Sept. 6/3 The excessive tuberation which potatoes brought under cultivation acquire.

Tubercle (tiūˈbəkl). [ad. L. tūberculum small swelling, boil, pimple, dim. of tūber, Tuber [2]. Cf. obs. F. tubercle (Cotgr., 1611.)] A small tuber or body resembling a tuber.

1. Anat. and Zool. A small rounded projection or protuberance, as on a bone, or on the surface of the body in various animals.

Often with defining word, as the specific name of such a structure: e.g. conoid, cuneiform, genial, laminated, madreporic, optic, scalene (etc.) tubercle: see the adjs.

1598 Barestus Hist. Man. 1. 17 To this Tubercle they ['bones' of the larynx] are inarticulated and knit. 1747 Gentl. Mag. Mar. 122/2 These creatures have several rows of tubercles on their bodies. 1846 Brittan tr. *Malgaigne's Man. Oper. Tubercular (tiūbəˈkiūlər), a. [ad. mod.L. tūberculār-is*, f. L. tūbercul-um Tubercle + -ar.]

1. Nat. Hist., etc. a. Of the nature or form of a tubercle; consisting of or constituting a tubercle.

b. Having or covered with tubercles, tuberculate.

1817 Kirby & Sp. Entomol. xxii. (1818) II. 279 A subcutaneous larva belonging to the same order,..moves also by tubercular legs. 1860 Mayne Expos. Lex., Tubercular, having tubercles; tubercled; tuberculate. 1877 Huxley Anat. Inv. Anim. v. 231 The surface of the elytron is covered with..tubercular prominences. 1880 Günther Fishes 176 The young are smooth and the old have a tubercular skin.

2. Path. Of, pertaining to, caused or characterized by, or affected with tubercles.

1799– [see b]. 1864 H. Spencer Princ. Biol. II. ii. 152 Tubercular matter, making its appearance at particular points, collects more and more round those points. 1897 Allbutt's Syst. Med. II. 47 Symptomatology — Nodular Leprosy—'Tuberculated', 'tubercular', 'tuberculous', 'nodular-dermal', 'dermal', 'cutaneous', 'hypertrophic' leprosy. 1899 Ibid. VIII. 805 Tubercular syphilide. ..The term 'tubercular' used above refers solely to the gross infiltration of the skin causing raised nodules, and has..no relation to the tubercle bacillus.

b. spec. In reference to tuberculosis or the tubercle-bacillus; now technically replaced by Tuberculous, q. v.

But as the discovery of the bacillus was made known only in 1882, the earlier examples of the word, though actually descriptive of results of the action of the bacillus, did not refer to it, but merely to the presence of tubercules.

1799 Med. Jrnl. II. 267, I have had..three cases of confirmed tubercular consumption. 1834 J. Forbes Kennet's Dis. Chest (ed. 4) 297 A portion of the pulmonary tissue..impregnated with grey tubercular matter. 1876 Bristowe The. & Pract. Med. (1878) 68 A..tendency of organs to become tubercular. 1898 Westm. Gaz. 10 Nov. 6/2 It did not recommend..the removal of every tubercular cow from our dairies and cow-sheds.

Hence Tubercularize v., trans. to make tubercular; to infect with tubercles, spec. with tuberculosis, = Tuberculize; whence Tubercularization; Tuberculariy adv., by means of tubercles, in quot. spec. of tuberculosis.

1843 F. H. Ramadge Curability of Consumption (1860) 55 The more this tissue is expanded, the less susceptibility does it retain of fresh tubercularization. 1889 Science 13 Sept. 177/2 Spittoons..should never be emptied on dung-heaps, [or] on garden-soil (where they may tubercularize fowl). 1889 Pop. Sci. Monthly Dec. 260 Having found a characteristic ..bacillus in all tubercularly altered organs.

Tuberculate (tiūbəˈkiūlēt), a. Nat. Hist. and Path. [ad. mod.L. tūberculātus, f. L. tūbercul-um Tubercle: see -ate [2].] Furnished or affected with tubercles; tubercled.

C. Blake Zool. 27 The molar teeth are usually tuberculate. 1889 W. Phillips Brit. Discomycetes 5 The tuberculate sporidia are frequently furnished with thread-like appendages at the extremities.

b. In comb. with another adj. (in Bot.), as tuberculate-hispid, hispid or rough with tubercles.

1822 W. P. C. Barton Flora N. Amer. I. 102 Petioles and stem tuberculate-hispid.

1771 Pennant in Phil. Trans. LXI. 272 The whole circumference of the back bounded by a tuberculated rib. 1784 André ibid. LXXIV. 274 Let us..recollect the tuberculated teeth in the thorn-back. 1845 Lindley Sch. Bot. vi. (1858) 83 Receptacle conical, toothed, tuberculated. 1861 Bentley Man. Bot. 129 When some of the divisions of a root become enlarged so as to form more or less rounded or egg-shaped excrescences..the root is said to be tuberculated, and each enlargement is called a tubercle.

b. Path. (also transf. characterized by tubercles).

1797 M. Baillie Morb. Anat. (1807) 221 The formation of the common tuberculated liver. 1804 Abernethy Surg. Obs. Tumours (1816) 51 Tuberculated Sarcoma..consists of an aggregation of small firm, roundish tumours,..connected together by a kind of cellular substance. 1822–7 Good Study Med. (1829) II. 489 A tuberculated state of the lungs. 1829 Ibid. III. 428 The palms of the hands [in leprosy] were seldom tuberculated. 1843 F. Tuft (tʊft), sb. Also 5 toft, tofte, 5–7 tuft, 6 tufte; 6–7 tuffe, 7–8 tuff. [The derivation presents many difficulties. Supposed to represent F. touffe (in OF. also toffe, tofe), generally referred to L. tūfa, 'a kind of helmet crest', or 'a kind of military standard' (in Vegetius, 386), appearing in Byzantine Greek as τούφα (see Du Cange). By some held to be ult. of German origin, ? adt. OLG. top or OHG. zopf. The final t is evidently an Eng. addition: cf. carafe, vulg. craft; also cliff, cliff; draff, draft; graff, graft, and vulgar paragraft, telegraft.

The difficulties of this derivation are that F. touffe is not the normal repr. of L. tūfa, but points to tuffa*, whereas the long ū of tūfa is supported by the Greek and by Beda's tufa[1] also that tūfa, tuffa, answer phonetically neither to Low nor High German. Cf. Pr. chuf, It. ciuffo, a tuft or lock of hair, ad. Ger. zopf. Beside these, the final t in the Eng. word is of minor difficulty.]

1. A bulbous plant of the genus Tulipa (N O. Liliaceæ), esp. the species T. Gesneriana, introduced from Turkey into Western Europe in the 16th c., and since extensively cultivated in very numerous varieties, blooming in spring, with broad bell-shaped or cup-shaped, usually erect, showy flowers, of various colours and markings; also, the flower itself.

The first mention of it by a Western European is by Busbek (c1556). the Emperor's ambassador, on the way from Adrianople to Constantinople, where 'ingens ubique florum copia offerebatur, narcissorum, hyacinthorum, et eorum quos Turcæ tulipan vocant'. It was grown by the Fuggers at Augsburg, where it was seen and described by Gesner in 1561. It was introduced successively in Vienna, Mechlin, France, and England; it is mentioned by Lyte in his transl. of Dodoneus.

[OE. tunne, wk. fem., ME. tunne, later tonne; cogn. with OFris. tunne, tonne, OLG. tunna* (MLG., LG. tunne (tünne)), MDu. tonne (Du. ton), OHG. tunna (MHG. tunne, Ger. tonne); late ON. tunna (Sw. tunna, mod. Norw. tunna, tynna, MDu. tunde, Da. tonde); also med.L. tunna (9th c. in Cassel Gloss.), OF. tonne, Pr. tona (in other Romanic. langs. only in derivative forms: see TONNEL, TUNNEL); also MIr., Ir. and Gael. tunna. Origin uncertain: app. not orig. Latin or Romanic.

As the OHG. retains initial t it must have been adopted (from LG. or med.L.) after the HG. sound shifting, i.e. after 700. Some suggest a Celtic source, viz. Gir. toun hide, skin, so that the original sense would be 'wine-skin'; but the MIr. tunna looks like an adopted word. At present it can only be said that the word appears to be as old or older in the LG. group of langs. including OE., than anywhere else; its occurrence in the Corpus Gloss c 725 is app. the earliest trace of the word in any lang. The later ME. spelling tonne was perh. after F., but prob. largely due to the scribal fashion of writing o for u, in contiguity to m, n, v, etc., as in son, tongue, honey, come, some, above, love, etc. From c 1688 the two forms tun and ton have been differentiated in use: see TON[1].]

Tunesome (tiū·nsŭm), a. rare–1. [f. TUNE sb. + -SOME.] Having 'tune' or melody; tuneful.

1890 Sat. Rev. 26 Apr. 514/2 These pieces are..tunesome and original.

Tunful (tu·nful). [f. TUN sb. + -FUL 2.] As much as fills a tun.

1562 TURNER Baths 4 Manye..carye great tunnfulls of it away, and drinke it to their houses. *c*1592 GREENE Vision Wks. (Grosart) XII. 203 But for every dram of mirth, they leane behinde .. a Tunfull of infecting mischiefs. 1819 SHELLEY Cyclops 197 You may drink a tunful if you will.

Tung-see TUNG. Tung, tunge, obs. ff. TONGUE.

Tungah, var. TANGA, an Indian (etc.) coin.

Tung-oil: see WOOD-OIL.

Tungstate (tu·ngstēt). Chem. [f. TUNGST(EN + -ATE 4.] A salt of tungstic acid.

1800 tr. Lagrange's Chem. I. 371 The other is known by mineralogists, under the name of wolfram..this is the tungstate of iron. 1839 DE LA BECHE Rep. Geol. Cornwall, etc. xv. 584 Except when mixed with wolfram, or the tungstate of iron and manganese. 1897 Allbutt's Syst. Med. IV. 596 One patient..recovered..while taking tungstate of soda.

Tungsten (tu·ngstĕn). [a. Sw. tungsten, i. tung heavy + sten stone.]

1770 ENGESTROM tr. Cronstedt's Syst. Min. 201 Ferrum calciforme terræ gadolinæ incognitis intimè nitiunum. The Tungsten-Stone. *a*1786 BERGMAN Chem. Ess. Scheele 285 Lapis Ponderosus, or Tungsten...It is probable that the constituent parts of this..have been hitherto unknown. 1799 Mem. Phil. I. 239 Tungsten..Scheele..affirmed that it contained a calcareous earth, united to a peculiar acid. 1822 IMPSON Sc. & Art II. 120 A mineral called Tungsten or ponderous stone, affords a peculiar metal.

2. Chem. (Formerly also in L. form tungstenum, as in other names of metals.) A heavy, steel-grey, ductile, very infusible metal, contained in the above mineral and in WOLFRAM (iron and manganese tungstate) and other minerals; used for wire in incandescent electric lamps. Symbol W (= wolframium); atomic weight 184 (O = 16).

1796 HATCHETT in Phil. Trans. LXXXVI. 291 The yellow oxyde of tungsten by ignition becomes blue or black. 1812 DAVY Chem. Philos. 427 Tungstenum is obtained from a mineral known by the name of wolfram. 1836–41 BRANDE Man. Chem. (ed. 5) 921 Tungsten..which has also been called Scheelium and Wolframium, was first obtained by Messrs. de Luyart [in 1783], from the tungstic acid previously discovered by Scheele, in 1781. 1862 London Rev. 16 Aug. 154 Tungsten added to steel communicates a most intense hardness to it, and renders it also very fine-grained. 1911 Daily News 22 Aug. 2 Tungsten may be converted into strong ductile form and drawn into a wire only one thousandth of an inch in diameter. 1912 Ann. Rep. Chem. Soc. IX. 69 Tungsten [Atomic Weight 183·6].

1862 London Rev. 16 Aug. 154 The alloy..is now becoming rather celebrated under the name of wolfram- or tungsten-steel. 1909 Institution News II. 171/2 The Tungsten lamp will not withstand over running to any great extent. 1911 Encycl. Brit. XVI. 665/2 The zirconium and tungsten wire lamps are equal to or surpass the tantalum lamp.

Hence †Tu·ngstenane, Davy's proposed name for a chloride of tungsten: see -ANE 2; Tungste·nic, †Tungstenical, Tungsteni·tic, adjs., of, pertaining to, or containing tungsten, tungstic; Tungsteni·ferous a. [-FEROUS] yielding tungsten.

1812 DAVY Chem. Philos. 429 "Tungstenane. 1796 KIRWAN Elem. Min. (ed. 2) 132 The tungstenic acid..assumes a blue colour when heated to redness. Ibid. 133 An ore of tungstenical substance. Ibid. II. 326 "Tungstenitic Calx, with Iron and Manganese, or Iron singly. Wolfram.

†1. = TUNGSTEN 2. Obs.

1796 KIRWAN Elem. Min. (ed. 2) II. 308 Tungstenite... This substance is capable of existing in three states. That of a Regulus, which I call Tungstenite. Ibid., Tungstenite. ..Hitherto it has been produced only in very minute Globules, being more difficultly reducible to a Metallic State than Manganese or Uranite.

2. = TUNGSTEN 1.

1894 MUIR & MORLEY Watts' Dict. Chem. IV. 797 Tungstenite, or scheelite (tungstate of Ca[lcium])..occur in various localities.

Tungstic (tu·ngstik), a. Chem. [f. TUNGST(EN + -IC 1 b.] Pertaining to or formed from tungsten; applied to compounds in which tungsten combines as a hexad (see -IC 1 b), as tungstic acid, $H_2O.WO_3$ (formerly = t. oxide), tungstic chloride, $WCl_6$, tungstic oxide, $WO_3$; also to minerals containing tungsten, as tungstic ochre (see OCHRE sb. 2), native tungstic oxide, also called Tu·ngstite.

1796 HATCHETT in Phil. Trans. LXXXVI. 286 In 1790, Mr. Heyer..made some experiments on this ore [molybdate of lead], from which he inferred that it was composed of lead, combined with the tungstic acid. 1836–41 BRANDE Man. Chem. (ed. 5) 923 The Nitro-tungstate of Potassa is the salt originally described by Scheele [1781] as tungstic acid. 1868 WATTS Dict. Chem. V. 915 Tungstic compounds, ..in which tungsten is hexatomic. 1868 DANA Min. (ed. 5) 256 Tungstite.

Tungsto-, combining form from TUNGSTEN, used in the names of compound acids (and their salts) containing the oxides of tungsten and another element, as tungstobo·ric and tungstosili·cic acids, whose salts are tungstobo·rates and tungstosili·cates.

1868 WATTS Dict. Chem. V. 915 Tungstosilicic acids. Ibid. 917 The tungstosilicates are obtained by saturating the acid with carbonates. 1883 Science L. 485/2 Tungstoboric acid proves to be a convenient reagent for characterizing the alkaloids and peptones. Ibid., Cadmic tungstoborate.

Tungstous (tu·ngstŏs), a. Chem. [f. TUNGST(EN + -OUS c.] Applied to compounds in which tungsten combines as a tetrad, as tungstous chloride, $WCl_4$, tungstous oxide, $WO_2$. (Cf. TUNGSTIC.)

1860 in MAYNE Expos. Lex. 1868 WATTS Dict. Chem. V. 898 Tungsten forms two classes of compounds, in one of which it is tetratomic, and in the other hexatomic: Tungstous Chloride, $WCl_4$; Tungstous Oxide, $WO^2$.

‖Tungua, a West Indian name of the CHIGOE.

1815 KIRBY & SP. Entomol. iv. (1818) I. 103 The celebrated Chigoe or Jiggers, called also .. Tungua. 1862 MAYHEW Lond. Labour III. 35 The most annoying species, however, is..a native of the tropical latitudes, variously named in the West Indies, chigoe, jigger, nigua, tungua, pique.

Turbine (tɜ·bĭn). [a. F. turbine, ad. L. turbo, turbin-em: see TURBO.]

1. Originally applied to a wheel revolving on a vertical axis, and driven by a column of water falling into its interior, and escaping by pipes, channels, or apertures, so arranged as to press by reaction on the periphery of the wheel, and cause it to revolve in the direction opposite to that of the escaping water. Now applied to any kind of machine in which this principle (sometimes combined with that of direct impact) is used or developed; the modifications and developments are very numerous, many of these being of highly complicated structure, in which neither the horizontality of the wheel nor the motive power is retained.

[1824 Brande in Built. Soc. Encyclopædia. July 256 Machines rotatoires à grande vitesse nommées turbines hydrauliques.] 1842 Civil Eng. & Arch. Jrnl. V. 266/1 The mechanical construction of the Turbine is..given, and its action..described. 1861 O. W. b. More fully steam-turbine: A steam motor in which rotatory motion is produced by steam impinging directly upon a series of vanes upon the circumference of a revolving cylinder or disk (or, in some types, acting and reacting alternately on moving and stationary elements).

1900 Engineer 2 Feb. 127/3 The main applications of the De Laval steam turbine are:—(1) Turbine motors, driving machinery by means of belts or gearing; (2) turbine dynamos, the dynamos being placed on the second motion shafts or a prolongation of the same; (3) turbine pumps..and (4) turbine exhaust and pressure fans or ventilators. 1900 N. Brit. Daily Mail 30 Jan., That is the whole secret of the turbine. In the modern application of it the steam blows upon the shaft and the shaft spins, and by an ingenious application of blades the steam which enters the first turbine when it leaves the boiler at a pressure of 225 lbs. to the square inch is utilised till the value of the last pound is all used up. 1905 Westm. Gaz. 16 Mar. 10/1 The dynamo is coupled directly to a Parsons turbine, which has introduced great changes and great economies in the driving of huge electrical plants.

c. A centrifugal separator used in sugar manufacture.

(In Persian dicts. ج turk is explained as 'A Turk, a beautiful youth, a barbarian, a robber', but the last three definitions are only applications of the national name, not explanations of its original meaning.]

1. Ethnology. Pl. Turks. The name of a numerous and widely spread family of the human race, occupying from prehistoric times large portions of Central Asia, and speaking a language and dialects belonging to the TURKIC branch of the Ural-Altaic (Finno-Tartar, or Turanian) linguistic family (a primary family of co-ordinate rank with the Indo-European or Aryan, and Semitic). Within this linguistic family the Turks are usually held to stand between the Ugrians and Mongols, having closest relationship to the latter group. The form Toork or Tourk (after Persian) is used by some (esp. in India) in this wide sense.

From their original home in Central Asia, chiefly from Turkestan, hordes of Turks at various times assailed and conquered other lands. Of these, the best known in the West were those calling themselves, after famous leaders, Seljūk and Osmānli respectively. The former overthrew the Abbasides, or first Mohammedan caliphs of Baghdad, and founded the Seljūk dynasty in their room; the latter, after embracing Islām, and receiving much Persian and Arab culture, arose on the ruins of the Seljūk empire in A.D. 1300 and became the ancestors of the Osmanli or Ottoman Turks in Asia and south-eastern Europe (see sense 2).

Probably the name Turk appears in English first in connexion with the Third Crusade, 1187–1192. The Turks of that date were Seljûks, not Ottomans. Saladin, the antagonist of Richard I., was a Kurd, originally in the service of the Seljûks. In the wider sense 1. is the name is of comparatively late use in English and the European langs. generally, the Turks of Central Asia being unknown in Western Europe.

T. Bealby in Times Gazetteer 16 1/3/2 Thirty years later [than 1017] the Turks—not the Ottomans (Osmanlis), but their predecessors, the Seljuks—invaded the Byzantine Empire for the first time.

2. Politics. A member of the dominant race of the Ottoman empire; in earlier times, a Seljûk; since 1300, an Osmanli or Ottoman; one who is, or considers himself, a descendant of the Osmanlis or other Turks. Sometimes (now rarely), any subject of the Grand Turk or Turkish Sultan; but usually restricted to Mohammedans. Pl The Turks, the Ottomans, the Turkish people.

Turkey² (tə̄·rki). Also 6–7 turkie, 6–8 turky. Pl. turkeys, formerly turkies. [Short for TURKEY-COCK, -HEN, app. applied orig. to the Guinea-fowl, a native of Africa, with which the American turkey was at first confounded: see TURKEY-COCK.]

[1555–1601: see TURKEY-COCK 2, TURKEY-HEN 1.] 1655 MOUFET & BENNET Health's Improvt. (1746) 116 They were first brought from Numidia into Turky, and thence to Europe, whereupon they were called Turkies.

2. In current use: A well-known large gallinaceous bird of the Linnean genus Meleagris, the species of which are all American; esp. M. gallopāvo, which was found domesticated in Mexico at the discovery of that country in 1518, and was soon after introduced into Europe, and is now valued as a table fowl in all civilized lands.

Two races of this, which have been variously regarded as sub-species or species, are found wild, of which one, the Northern wild turkey, which has been variously distinguished as americana, sylvestris, and fera, is native of the eastern half of the continent, from parts of Canada and the Missouri region to Texas, where it is succeeded by M. mexicana, the Mexican wild turkey. As in the case of many long-domesticated animals, it is doubtful from which of these wild types the domestic turkey has arisen, but the fact that the latter was domesticated in Mexico, and that the northern race shows less adaptability to domestication, favours the opinion that M. mexicana was the source. Some however hold that there may have been two domestic breeds, represented in England by the Norfolk and the Cambridgeshire breeds, or that at least mixture with americana has taken place. Another species, M. ocellata, with iridescent plumage, is smaller and much more beautiful; it has not been tamed.

TUREKY[1] + COCK sb.[1] In the 16th c. synonymous with Guinea-cock or Guinea-fowl, an African bird known to the ancients (the μελεαγρὶς of Aristotle, meleagris of Varro and Pliny), the American bird being at first identified with or treated as a species of this. The African bird is believed to have been so called as originally imported through the Turkish dominions; it was called Guinea-fowl when brought by the Portuguese from Guinea in West Africa. After the two birds were distinguished and the names differentiated, turkey was erroneously retained for the American bird, instead of the African. From the same imperfect knowledge and confusion Meleagris, the ancient name of the African fowl, was unfortunately adopted by Linnæus as the generic name of the American bird.]

†Turlupin. Obs. rare. [In sense 1, = OF. turlupin, in med.L. turlupin-us (14th c., Du Cange), of unknown origin. In later F. in other senses: see below, also Littré and Hatz.-Darm.]

1. A name given to a sect of heretics in the 14th c., who are said to have maintained that one ought not to be ashamed of anything that is natural.

1639 FULLER Holy War III. xix. (1840) 149 Turlupins; that is, dwellers with wolves, being forced to flee into woods. 1804 RANKEN Hist. Brit. XIV. 592/2 [A woman, Jeanne Daubenton] being the head of a sect called the Turlupins. The Turlupins reappeared in 1421 at Arras and Douai and were persecuted in a similar way.

¶ 2. By Urquhart taken to render F. tirelupin in Rabelais, said by Duchat to be a name given in 1372 to a certain people who imitated Cynics, and lived on lupins which they gathered (tirairent) in the fields.

Cotgrave and Littré (who spells tirelopin) treat this as a separate word. Cotgr. has 'Tirelupin, a catch-bit, or captious companion; a scowndrell, or scurvie fellow'; 'Turlupin, a grub, mushrome, start-up, new-nothing, man of no value'. Urquhart applied Cotgrave's explanation of turlupin to tirelupin.

1653 URQUHART Rabelais I. Prol., So saith a Turlupin or a new start-up grub of my books, but a turd for him. [RABELAIS Aniitant en dict ung Tirelupin de mes livres: mais bien pour tout ly.)

[Mod. F. has turlupin in the sense 'buffoon, merry-andrew' (from the name assumed by an actor in French farce a 1630), hence 'a sorry jester, a low punster', and turlupinade a low pun or word-play. Cf. obs. Ital. turlupino (Doucet) = 'turlum a foole, a gull, a ninnie, a patch' (Florio).]

Turm (tɜm). [a. OF. turme, torme (15th c. in Godef.), ad. L. turma a troop, squadron.] A body or band of people, esp. a troop of horsemen; spec. a troop of thirty or thirty-two horsemen (= L. turma).

The English forms vary greatly, but tarmaret, tormarith resemble a recorded F. terre mérite and med. or mod.L. terra merita 'deserving or deserved earth', a name which the powder is said by Littré to have borne in commerce. The reason and origin of this L. and F. appellation are obscure; but in English the final t appears (by serbal error, or phonetic differentiation, or influence of such words as arsenic) to have become c or k, with the second r sometimes changed to l or n. Some have suggested a corruption of the Persian-Arabic name hurkum 'saffron', whence L., F., and Sp. curcuma; but the change seems too unlikely. The application of the name in Eng. to Tormentil arose apparently from some real or fancied similarity of properties or uses.

(Littré has s. v. Curcuma 'safran des Indes et curcuma, dite terre-méritè, quand elle est réduite en poudre'. Hatz.-Darm. have also, s. v. Curcuma, Du Pinet, 16th c. in Delboeuf Recueil 'La curcuma ou terra merita des apothicaires'.)]

In F., as in Eng., first recorded as the name of the colouring matter derived from one of the plants bearing the name. In mod. Sp., Pg., and It. chiefly used in sense 2 b.]

1. A violet-blue or purple colouring matter, obtained from the plant Crozophora tinctoria (see 2 a), formerly much used for colouring jellies, confectionery, wines, etc., and later as a pigment. (See also quots. 1712 and 1830.)

Coarse linen rags are steeped in the juice, and then dried and exposed in vats over an ammoniacal mixture; hence the designation † turnsole in rags = F. tournesol en drapeau.
